Case Study

Sam Foreman

Project Management Apprentice

Sam Foreman from North Shields is employed by North Tyneside Council, in the housing growth team.

Sam has begun a Project Management apprenticeship within North Tyneside Council. Previously he had been working in various job roles within the community, while searching for career advancement. He is excited to develop management skills while serving his local community.

Sam said: It's a wonderful experience to be working alongside such passionate individuals. Everyone has been warm, welcoming and supportive. I'm amazed by the positive energy everyone shares throughout each day.

We said: Sam has been a welcome addition to our team. He has hit the ground running and is actively supporting the team across a range of high-profile projects, that support the council's ambition for North Tyneside."

If you have ambition and determination, our apprenticeships are an excellent option for you. You will receive formal training to gain a recognised qualification, alongside gaining technical knowledge, practical experience and wider skills you need for employment and a future career.
